East Gate to the Big Bend Wilderness Area

Sanderson has had true Cowboy life. Before relocating to Langtry, Judge Roy Bean disembarked at Sanderson's still-standing 1881 depot and attempted to start a saloon. Sensing competition, an established saloon owner poisoned Bean's whiskey barrels with kerosene, forever branding Sanderson as "The town too mean for Bean." Vestiges of its wild and woolly frontier beginnings abound, from the bank once robbed by the Wild Bunch to the train robbery in 1912, known as the 'Last Great Train Robbery' in the west, where two men had attempted to rob a train, but a train agent had killed them. They were buried at Cedar Grove Cemetery in Sanderson.

The town and the county are not that far removed from those days of Texas legend and lore. The strong influence of those pioneer days of cowboy culture, railroading, oil and gas lives on in the descendants of its original founders, many of whom still run their family ranches and businesses.

The town has strived over the years to keep its head above water. In 1965, a flood killed 21 people and destroyed homes and businesses. However, Sanderson has rebuilt itself and is still here to welcome all who want to be a part of this wonderful town or even if you are just passing through.

Welcome to Sanderson and Terrell County

Sanderson was designated the "Cactus Capital of Texas." by the Texas State Legislature. In honor of this designation, Sanderson celebrates its plethora of spiny, thorny and pointy plants with the Prickly Pear Pachanga every October during the week and weekend leading up to the Columbus Day holiday. Pachanga means "Big Party" in Spanish, and the festival features cactus contests, entertainment, arts, crafts and many other activities. Sanderson is known for having the largest Cinco de Mayo celebration in far West Texas, with great food and music.

Residents and officials alike strive to keep our existing quality of life and provide amenities and services that make Sanderson a wonderfully friendly place to visit.

Sanderson is the County Seat with a population currently of about 900. There are only 1,000 in the entire Terrell County area. Dryden, 20 miles east, is the only other town in the county. About ten souls - plus a few goats and sheep- currently lives there. Sanderson is approximately 3,000 feet above sea level. It is only 25 miles north of the US/Mexican boarder - although the nearest "legal" crossing is at Del Rio, 120 miles east.

The vastness and vistas of the distant mountains in Mexico and Big Bend, the grandeur of an endless sky, the fantastic light and magical sunsets combine and inspire great art, writing and music. The brilliance of the stars at night alone is worth the price of admission, and this show is open year-round...and it is FREE!

The legacy of our rich and colorful past endures in its surviving architectural heritage of 100-year-old adobe, rock and stucco structures, Victorian homes, boomtown-era retail buildings, the century-old depot, railroad buildings and cattle pens.

It is very quiet here, which makes it a great place for more people and families to move here. Tourism is always increasing, which adds enormously to the economy.

If you are thinking about moving from the big city and enjoying a change of pace - almost a return to the lifestyle of the 1950's - consider moving to Sanderson. There are many things to enjoy. We have an exemplary public school, low crime and a low cost of living. We are always welcoming newcomers, guest and travelers alike.

Sanderson is a very hospitable town, if you need help finding what you are looking for, just stop and ask. The town's people of Sanderson are always willing to lend a helping hand. That is just another reason to stop and visit. You can also find more information at the web sites and phone number listed in this brochure.
